conference had been a success but that none of the details of the meeting should be given out to them. He said that he considered Taylor's action a violation of confidence.

Professor Kerner was questioned as to how the committee of ten came to be organized. He testified that he was called on the telephone by Prof. R. C. Journey to attend a meeting at his home and that he had agreed to go on the condition that he be allowed independent judgment in regard to any action that might be taken at the meeting. At this meeting Kerner said that there was a lot of free talk.

"It is characteristic of most faculties to do more talking than some other things," said Kerner.

Kerner testified that after the matter had been thoroughly discussed someone moved that something definite be done. "I then proposed the conference of the committee of ten with President Hill," said Professor Kerner.

When asked how Clark stood on the question, Kerner said that he seemed strongly opposed to the idea of a conference of this kind believing that it would fail and would be a useless procedure. He added that this circumstance led him to believe that Clark was very bitter in his attitude toward the president. Clark seemed to desire, according to Kerner, the calling together of the faculty for a vote of censure of President Hill. He also stated that the views taken by Shepard and Journey at this meeting seemed to be in harmony with that of Professor Clark, but that neither expressed himself so strongly.

ALL HAIL THE SPRING!
ALSO THE DANDELION, SAYS HORACE MAJOR

In spite of all that the poets may say, spring is not always as heavenly as they would have you believe. As proof of that statement, we offer—the dandelion. Every spring the home-owner looks at his lawn and thinks how green it will be later on. Then comes the summer time and, with it, a lawn yellow with dandelions.

Prof. Horace F. Major offers a remedy for the pest. According to Professor Major, it is the only practical method but is not a new one, having been used for a number of years. The method simply consists of spraying the lawn with sulphate of iron two or three times during the summer.

"The main reason that iron sulphate has not been used to eradicate the dandelion," says Professor Major, "is that it is expensive and can only be bought in car-load lots. Private owners do not need such large quantities and large institutions, such as the University, do not have sufficient funds to use it."

"In order to do away with the dandelion, it is necessary to kill the roots, plant and the seeds. Iron sulphate is the only thing that accomplishes all that without injury to the grass. Experiments have been carried out in New York and have been very successful. The only effect that the chemical have upon the grass is a slight darkening of the color."

Professor Major advocates the use of iron sulphate by communities so that a spraying machine and a large amount of the chemical can be bought and used cooperatively. The barrel spray used applying the sulphate is operated by two men and costs about $30.

Outside of the use of sulphate of iron, the only solution for the problem is to get down on your knees and dig them out by the roots, according to Professor Major.

STUDENTS LIKE POEMS BEST

Book Stores' Best Sellers Are Kipling's Collections.

University students report the best-sellers list. The sales of the book stores here show that students have their own choice in books. These run to poetry. Despite the fact that women are going into what, traditionally, has been man's field, they still have their feminine likes in books.

The most popular book among students, both men and women, is a collection of Kipling's poems, but Guest, Service and the anthologies of Miss Rittenhouse are also popular. "Main Street" by Sinclair Lewis is the only fiction that sells as well as poetry. Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" is the only popular dramatic work.

Fiction runs a poor second, with Grey and Raine mostly sold to men, and Eleanor Porter to women.

HOG CHOLERA LOSS REDUCED

By Co-operation With Farm Bureau Farmers Many Times Repaid.

Hog cholera loss in New Madrid County has been reduced in three years to one sixth what it was prior to the organization of the farm bureau and the employment of a county agent. One of the first projects undertaken by this farm bureau at the time of its organization April 1, 1918, was a hog cholera survey of every school district in the county. By this means it was determined that the farmers of New Madrid county in the year immediately preceding had lost by cholera 12,440 hogs worth $186,600.

The survey has been repeated every year and now the fourth annual report has been announced by County Agent H. C. Hensley who has been in active charge of the work throughout the three-year period. The survey has been merely a part of an aggressive campaign for cholera prevention.

SIZE REGULATES PLANTING

Soybeans Vary Greatly in Weight and Should Be Sowed Accordingly.

When one plants soybeans it is well to adjust the rate of planting according to the size of the seed—which depends entirely on the variety. Soybeans weigh sixty pounds to the bushel, says W. C. Etheridge of the College of Agriculture, but they vary greatly in size. Thus, 2,100 seeds of the Mammoth weigh a pound—just as much as 6,400 seeds of the Peking. Within the usual range of varieties—including Morse and Wilson—the planting requirements vary from fifteen to twenty pounds for an acre where planted in rows for a seed crop, and from six to ninety pounds where drilled or broadcasted hot hay. Measured by performance, the soybean is a soil builder—one of the foremost legumes in production of forage and the greatest in production of seed.

The Charm of the Four-Poster

Like the Windsor chair and the gateleg table, the four-poster Bed has been handed down from the time of our great-grandparents and will continue as an aristocrat through many generations to come.

And why should it not hold its popularity? Certainly, when it comes to grace and beauty of design, there is nothing in Bedroom Furniture that approaches its class and, as for comfort—well, there are some four-posters in Parker Furniture Company's stock that, fitted with our famous Queen Anne box spring and mattress, would tempt even old Morpheus himself, the fabled God of Sleep.

A Four-Poster, you know, can appropriately be used almost anywhere and with furniture you already have, because it is a thoroughbred all by itself and doesn't have to be matched up with anything. A dozen designs to choose from and prices are $25 upward.
